The first of these is the fact that the number of cases of disease is not proportional to the number of persons exposed to it.
 This is true of all diseases which are caused by contagion. The number of cases is usually small, and the number of persons exposed is usually large. This is because the disease is not always communicated to every person who is exposed to it.

The second of these is the fact that the disease is not always fatal. This is true of all diseases which are caused by contagion. The disease is usually cured, and the patient recovers. This is
 always fatal. The disease is
